Description

We'll start with a drive to an ancient Thracian religious sanctuary – Belintash. Interestingly, there is a powerful magnetic anomaly in the area that throws compasses off, which many believe attests to the area's powerful energy. Belintash is the second largest Thracian sanctuary in Bulgaria and was likely used as a solar observatory. The rocks have been carved into shapes resembling the heads of gods and animals. The head of the god Sabazios faces east, towards the rising sun. The nature of this sanctuary is steeped in legend and mystery, and historians have theorized about its significance for centuries. We will climb up the rocks to the top. The view from up there is breathtaking, with views towards nearby rock formations.

We'll next head towards Krastova Gora ("Crucifix Forest") – a place known for its miraculous power and healing properties. Tens of thousands of pilgrims visit it every year seeking help from its miracle-working cross or simply to get in touch with their spiritual side. According to the legends, centuries ago below the mountain peak there was a monastery in which a fragment of the Holy Cross was kept. Recently, two churches and 12 chapels were built in this holy place, each with its own history and folk tales surrounding it.
